

ABOUT to make a major crossover from the indie charts to Top of the Pops stardom with their single Never are The House of Love. But singer Guy Chadwick confesses that his songs only come when he's been suffering a particularly bad time.

"I can't just sit down and come up with songs. They seem to happen when I'm coming out of a particularly bad time. They're very personal and I don't really understand the effect they sometimes have on others. People seem to find answers in them." Maybe it's something to do with his frequent references to religion? "It's an acknowledgement of the unknown", he says. "I feel life's a search and there's so much we'll never know and that gets pigeon-holed into something called God. But you have to be aware of yourself, too, and sometimes I'm unbelievably self-aware and that can be extremely frustrating."
