

More mistakes coming up! Corporate poets THE HOUSE OF LOVE were mixing their forthcoming album (provisionally titled 'We've Got A Producer And We're Not Afraid To Use Him – Ha Ha') when matchmaking A&R type ADRIAN THRILLS (who, we're told, once invented the NME) learned that A GUY CALLED GUY and the boys are big fans of New Age guru STEVE REICH. Thrills thought he would fix up a blind date between the band and their hero, and took them down to Radio 1 HQ, under the impression that it was wacky New Man DJ STEVE WRIGHT they were desperate to do lunch with. Fortunately, the error was spotted before the two parties met up, and a great deal of embarrassment was averted. (Apparently, The House Of Love have never heard of Steve Wright.)

NME

3 Jun 1989