

Rugby gig for House of Love

THE House Of Love are to play a surprise gig at Rugby's Railway Club next week, Street Talk can reveal.

The popular guitar band, whose single I Don't Know Why I Love You hit No 41 in the charts last week after massive Radio One airplay, will be at the 300-capacity venue next Friday.

The band are used to crowds of 2,000, but are returning to Rugby because it's singer Guy Chadwick's former home town.

Chadwick, now 34, is an ex-pupil of Lawrence Sherriff school and a former student at East Midlands College in Rugby. He moved to London to start The House Of Love ten years ago.

Tickets for the gig, priced £6, are available from Discovery Records in Rugby.
